

Marie Paldam Folker

Senior Consultant (MSc. in Anthropology), Danish Technological Institute

Marie is an experienced R&D professional with expertise in qualitative and explorative research, project and programme management, user involvement and multistakeholder engagement in collaborative technology and innovation projects. At the Danish Technological Institute Marie works with academia, health care providers, technology companies, the voluntary sector and end-user organisations to accelerate the development and deployment of innovative solutions for independent living. She is specialized in digital health and assisted living technologies - combining solid experience in driving collaborative innovation processes with a deep interest in using anthropological concepts and methods to understand health, illness and technology as part of everyday social life.
